Heavy Rain Drenches Thousands Lining Streets As Procession Passes; Queen Mary Nods Head to Multitude Mourning King

LONDON, Jan. 28.—(UP)—King George's body was borne today in a state procession as magnificent as any of modern times, along streets massed crushingly with silent crowds of his subjects, to Paddington railway station and burial among his ancestors in a vault of St. George's chapel in gray walled Windsor castle.

The flashing of brilliant uniforms of kings, princes, nobles and soldiers; the roar of saluting guns, the deep toned tolling of bells, the silver notes of chimes, the slow funeral strains of massed bands, the wind, wailing laments of bagpipes, the slow, measured tread of soldiers on the sanded streets—all these combined to make the procession a spectacle that was overwhelming emotionally to many who saw it.

Soldiers of many regiments, sailors, marines, air force men, field marshals, court officers marched ahead of the gun carriage on which the king's coffin was drawn by sailors of the naval school in which he spent his boyhood.

DAVEY ATTACKS TRACY'S OFFICE

"Case of Neglect" Cited; State Auditor May Answer

COLUMBUS, Jan. 28.—(UP)—Ohio's capital today awaited a reply from State Auditor Joseph Tracy to charges made by Governor Davey in a radio talk, in which the auditor was accused of "small-minded partisanship, lack of courage, inefficiency and carelessness."

The governor suggested an investigation of the office of Tracy, a Republican.

"It might be well to inquire into the conduct of his office," Gov. Davey said. "No one knows whether his accounts are correct nor what is the actual condition of state books. It is a flagrant case of neglect. The situation is sufficiently serious that it might well call for legislative action."

Gov. Davey accused the auditor of "lacking responsibility."

"The accounts of the state auditor have not been audited for a dozen years," he said. "He has run along in a careless, slipshod manner, entirely oblivious to his public responsibility."

The governor cited the case of Frank Brothers, former chief of the accounting department of the conservation division who was indicted on embezzlement charges, as "an illustration of the auditor's culpable negligence."

MAVIS APPOINTED CITY'S HEALTHER, REPLACES JUSTUS

The city health department today had undergone re-organization with J. F. Mavis, new service director, being appointed health officer, succeeding W. M. Justus. Miss Charlotte Phelps, efficient city nurse, was re-employed, and Mrs. Hazey Seymour will continue to serve as clerk until March 1 after which Miss Mary Lee Seall will assume her position.

The report of Miss Phelps was read at the meeting of the health board Monday evening. In it Miss Phelps reported visits totalling 4,255 during the year. All school children were weighed four times and measured twice; 104 were immunized against diphtheria.

Other facts included in the report of the nurse were: total visits; pre-natal, 70; maternity, 384; infant, 444; pre-school, 63; tuberculosis, 35, including old cases, also suspects and post-sanatorium; bedside care and general, 485; communicable diseases, 183; surgical dressings, 85; birth certificates delivered, 146; miscellaneous, 459.

Governor Davey declined to conduct a special election to fill the vacancy left by the death of Charles C. Truax, congressman-at-large, and is expected to follow the same plan in this case.

As a result of Underwood's approval as judge to succeed Benson W. Hough the "woods is full" of candidates for his job.

Ray O'Donnell, assistant federal district attorney, declared Tuesday that many cases were piling up in federal court and the sooner the new judge gets on the job the better. Judge Robert Nevin of Dayton has been hearing the most important actions.

Mr. Underwood's new job will pay $10,000 annually, and is for lifetime.

He will spend most of his time in Columbus but will also conduct court in Steubenville, Dayton and Cincinnati.

Midwest Cities Report Low Marks; Ice Impedes Traffic in Gotham

A break in the week-long cold wave, which has taken more than 250 lives throughout the nation, was seen today by forecasters. J. R. Lloyd, Chicago forecaster, said he believed "the worst is over."

Tuesday was the first day in six that Circleville did not experience sub-zero weather early in the day. Dr. H. R. Clarke's thermometer showed the official mark one degree above zero as the lowest point reached during the night.

Fuel Supply Short

Warm weather is the only hope of preventing widespread suffering in mid-western homes without fuel. Several local coal dealers reported their supplies practically depleted today; while others were well-supplied. Consumption of coal in the last seven days of intense cold was doubled.

Kitchen gas stoves provided the only warmth in many Iowa homes. An acute state-wide fuel shortage was reported throughout the state. Retail and wholesale coal dealers said their yards were empty.

The cold was "spotty" in all the nation from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic seaboard and into the deep south. Minneapolis, usually one of the coldest spots, reported 9 below. Kirksville, Mo., topped the Minneapolis reading by 6 degrees, reporting 15 below, while Terre Haute, Ind., had 14 below.

Gotham Traffic Stopped

In New York City the temperature stood at 9 above early today but traffic was impeded by icy streets and snow-covered sidewalks.

FIRE THREATENS TO WIPE OUT BORDER-LINE TOWN

UNION CITY, Ind., Jan. 28.—(UP)—Flames which threatened to wipe out the business section of this Ohio-Indiana border-line town, raced through eight business and apartment buildings with a loss of approximately $250,000 today.

Starting shortly after midnight in a small plumbing shop, the fire raged for hours before firemen of three cities brought it under control.

More than a score of persons, clad only in their night clothing and hastily-donned coats, were driven from the apartment building and stood shivering in the eight-below zero temperatures. A nearby hotel was turned into a relief station.

Bucket brigades were formed to extinguish small fires on roofs.

Former Chorine Acquitted

A JURY decided last night that former chorine Lucille Thorne Horan, is "a little buttercup" rather than "a raging red-head" and acquitted her of a charge that she murdered her husband, Frank. Assistant District Attorney John T. Walsh had called on the jury, all men, to condemn her as a "raging red-head." Her own attorney, Samuel M. Fleischman, dubbed her "little buttercup." Three of the jurors wept at Fleischman's words and after four hours of deliberation all the veniremen decided she was right. Horan was shot last fall after an all night drinking party with his young wife. The state charged that she shot him because she had tired of him. Mrs. Horan, who won a chorus place on Broadway after winning a Lackawanna, Pa., beauty contest, asserted she was beating her in a drunken frenzy.

TWO ARMED MEN FLEE AS ALARM RINGS AT BANK

Excitement Last Less Than Minute; Highway Patrolmen Begin Search

Two bandits, wearing khaki ween moustaches, were frantically in their attempt to loot the Ashville Banking Co. shortly before noon Tuesday when the clanging of a burglar alarm frightened them.

State and county officers started a dragnet over all roads in central Ohio but no arrests had been reported at press time.

The thugs entered the bank about 10:45 o'clock wearing khaki costumes, moustaches, and went to a window, and took a black automatic pistol from Willis, Cromley-st. editor, and Cleona Dennick, Long-st. keeper, were working at their desks when the bandits entered.

Spoke Few Words

"Come on now, come on now," were the only words the bandits spoke, the employees heard. Willis arose from his desk, took his hands and walked toward the window. Mrs. Horan arose from her desk, and toward another window. The bandits pushed her foot on the alarm button. Neither spoke a word to the bandits.

The alarm had previously been set off by O. W. Willis, cashier, who saw the holdup from a rear room where he had been making a telephone call. He started into the outer banking office and saw the bandits at the window. He stepped on the alarm button in the rear office and ran out the back door headed for the Citizens' bank to obtain guns.

As soon as the alarm sounded one of the bandits shouted "Let's go" to the other and they fled out the front door to their car, a dark blue 1935 model Plymouth coupe, parked about five feet from the curb. The car bore license tags 2767K, which officers later learned had been stolen.

Struck Parked Car

As they started away their car skidded on the slippery street and struck an auto parked on the side opposite the bank, bending a fender. The name of the car owner was unknown, Ashville residents reported.

The bank is located at 18 Long-st and the bandits drove north out Long-st apparently headed for Columbus.

James Borror, well known Ashville resident, was the only person in the bank at the time of the attempted holdup other than the employees. He had been talking with Mr. Willis, the cashier, and

LONDON TO JOIN PUP CONTEST IN TOPEKA SPEECH

Observers Say Wednesday
Evening's Address at Kansas Day to Be Keynote

TOPEKA, Kans., Jan. 28. (UP)—Two events indicated today that Gov. Alf M. Landon will announce his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination in his Kansas day speech here tomorrow night.

The first centered around revelations from sources close to the governor that he will discuss national issues and criticize the New Deal. The second was an announcement that the Kansas Executive will present his name to nomination as a candidate.

Although Landon may not deliver an outright announcement of his candidacy, any discussion or criticism of New Deal policies will catapult him into the presidential arena.

Landon in Limelight

The celebration today and tomorrow, marking the 75th birthday of the state and 44th anniversary of the Kansas Day club, will find the state projected upon the national political stage for the first time. Although the Kansas day club was formed for the purpose of holding annual Republican "love feasts" and announcing state candidacies, the Kansas governor, who has won mention for his budget balancing activities, will occupy the limelight.

Since Landon's boom for the nomination began July 3, 1935, when he told the nation about Kansas economy over a national radio hookup, he has made only one out-state speaking trip. That was at Cleveland, O., Nov. 6, when he discussed the Kansas record.

Political observers and friends of Landon are of one feeling, that the stage is set tomorrow for an announcement of his availability.

A rumor yesterday that John Hamilton, Kansas national committeeman and general counsel of the national committee, will resign his latter position to assist Landon strengthened the belief that the Kansas executive will toss his hat into the ring.

Many to Attend

The Kansas Day club has invited Republican leaders from 48 states to the celebration. Special trains will bring several hundreds from Missouri, Nebraska and Oklahoma. Large delegations are expected from Pennsylvania, New York and Washington, D. C.

The first vanguard of several hundred from neighboring states arrived today to meet Landon and discuss plans for the national campaign in midwestern states. Included in this group was Harrison Spangler, Iowa national committeeman, who is in charge of western headquarters for the national organization.

Between 10,000 and 12,000 persons are expected for the festivities including 5,000 Republicans from other states.

ITALIANS CLAIM GREAT VICTORIES OVER DEFENDERS

Observers Say Graziani Could Sight Addis Ababa Within Ten Days

ROME, Jan. 28.—(UP)—Italy cheered a smashing offensive of her southern African armies today, which according to native reports from Neghelli, Ethiopia, has destroyed the Ethiopian army of 25,000 men and paved the way for a possible advance on Addis Ababa.

The Neghelli advices indicated that Ras Desta Dantu, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, is convinced his country has lost and plans to retire to a copric convent for life. Of his great army of Ethiopian warriors, barely a thousand men are left, the reports add. This remnant has retired to Gulan, capital of the Sidamo district.

Great Loss Report

Official communiques issued here said 10,000 Ethiopians have been killed or wounded on the southern front in the battle for possession of the strategic Canale Dorya river valley, the greatest losses yet recorded in any engagement of the war.

Meanwhile, Italian losses were held to a minimum, the communiques said. They were limited to several hundred Italian native soldiers killed or wounded and an unspecified number of white troops.

Italians here were jubilant over the series of spectacular victories on the southern front. Since Gen. Rodolfo Graziani started his mechanized war machine rolling on Jan. 12 in the major offensive of the war, Italian troops have carried the Roman eagle half-way to the Ethiopian capital. The biggest headlines since the beginning of

Questions and Answers

Does length of cooking time affect the finished product when cauliflower is prepared?

Cauliflower, a relative of cabbage, should not be cooked any longer than is necessary for doneness. Start it in rapidly boiling water, leaving the kettle uncovered. This method preserves the fresh, green tinge so characteristic of the uncooked cauliflower. When one head is separated into flowerets and cooked in about six and one-half cups of water, eight to ten minutes should be long enough for cooking.

Please give me some suggestions for planning my marketing on an economy scale.

Your question is not very specific, so the answer must necessarily be general. A plan of marketing once a week, on Friday or Saturday, should enable you to take advantage of week-end specials. Store the foods adequately to preserve them well. Plan menus which will make use of left-overs and avoid waste. Buy some meats in large cuts, so that you may slice them at home as the need arises, and avoid drying out of the cut surfaces. Trimming may be used for soup stock and meat salads.

Plan menus for the entire week. Take inventory of refrigerator contents and cupboard supplies before making out your market list, to avoid over-supply of certain commodities. Buy in quantities so that reduced prices may be obtained.

When I wish to substitute cornstarch for flour in thickening a sauce, should I use the same amount called for in the recipe?

To use the same amount would probably make the sauce thicker than you desire, as cornstarch has about twice the thickening value of flour. For the same consistency, change your recipe to use half as much cornstarch as the amount of flour specified.

Please give me a recipe for Chocolate Oatmeal Cookies.

This drop cookie is baked in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Use these ingredients:

Chocolate Oatmeal Cookie

1/2 C. butter
1 C. sugar
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/2 tsp. salt
2 sq. chocolate
1/4 C. milk
1 1/2 C. oatmeal
1 C. flour, sifted
1 tsp. baking powder

Cream butter, gradually add sugar, egg and salt. Melt chocolate, cool it, then add to butter mixture. Add flour and baking powder to oatmeal. Then add flour and milk alternately to creamed butter mixture. When thoroughly combined drop from a spoon on cookie sheets and bake 10 to 15 minutes.

the war acclaimed this achievement.

The southmost wing of Gen. Graziani's army has captured Hadara, only 75 miles from Allata and the southern lake region. Uadara was occupied on Jan. 23 and is 5 miles northwest of Dolo, starting point for the drive from Italian Somaliland.

Could Reach Capital

Foreign correspondents who have returned here from the southern front say that Gen. Graziani could put a mobile army within sight of Addis Ababa within 10 days. The region through which the troops would have to advance is favorable to lightning-fast movements and, as far as is known, is not defended. The terrain would favor the mechanized forces.

Observers doubt, however, that Graziani would make such a maneuver unless the high military command decides on a spectacular offensive against Addis Ababa in an effort to demoralize the northern Ethiopian armies defending the Makale and Harar sectors.

SENATE TO VOTE ON SIX CHOICES

President Appoints New Federal Reserve Board

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(UP)—Early senate approval of the six men named to the federal reserve board by President Roosevelt was indicated today as the banking committee took up consideration of the nominations.

Comment by banking and congressional leaders indicated general approval of the selections. A seventh member is expected to be appointed, probably from the farm belt, in a day or two.

Sen. Carter Glass, D., Va., who wrote the federal reserve act, and frequent critic of New Deal banking policies, said "it is a pretty, sure board."

The six appointees are Marriner S. Eccles, banker, and M. S. Szymczak, former Chicago city official, both re-appointed; Joseph A. Broderick, banker; Ronald Ransom, banker; John McKee, banker, and Ralph W. Morrison, economist.

Three, Eccles, Szymczak and Morrison, are regarded as liberals, the others as conservatives. The new board will contain at least four bankers, whereas Eccles was the only banker on the board retiring Feb. 1.

The first problem to come before the new board will be application of the old board's order boosting margin requirements on stock market speculators from 45 to 55 per cent, effective next Monday.

The board will be charged with applying the brakes upon any indication of credit expansion beyond "safe limits. Some economists believe that sufficient base now exists for carrying a credit inflation far in excess of that in 1928-29.

U. S. SPEEDING BONUS DETAILS

Applications for Baby Bond Already Prepared

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—(UP)—Governmental machinery roared in full speed today to give veterans their bonus on June 15 and to force a decision on how the taxpayers shall pay the $2,237,000,000 bill.

Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans' administrator, said application plans for the "baby" bond bonus already have been prepared and probably will go into the mails today.

A White House statement said application blanks will be available at all regional offices of veterans administration and in the hands of service organizations within the next two or three months urged veterans to be "patient."

3,518,000 to Benefit

The mechanics of paying the bonus voted yesterday over the president's veto provided for placing baby bonds in the hands of some 3,518,000 veterans by mid-June. President Roosevelt and veterans leaders joined in urging former soldiers to hold the bonds as a three per cent investment, except in cases of urgent need.

But the complicated machinery of paying the bonus is simple compared to the question of how congress is going to get the money out of the public pocketbook to finance the expenditure.

New tax proposals were considered certain. But congress with an eye on forthcoming elections wants the initiative to come from the White House. President Roosevelt already has experts at work drafting new taxation to finance whatever new farm program is adopted.

Congress probably would refuse to authorize payment of the bonus in printing press money. But despite efforts to persuade veterans

Bruno's New Lawyer in Action

It was announced that Turkus would move to impeach the testimony of Amandus Hockmuth, star witness for the state at Hauptmann's trial.

not to cash their baby bonds immediately after June 15 a large part of the money must be provided in one way or another. Tax resources from which some or all of the funds could be obtained, include:

New inheritance taxes, which the treasury was understood to be considering on the theory that collections could be kept separate to apply against the national debt. Higher income taxes as favored—and likely to be proposed again—by Sen. Robert La Follette. Boosted corporation taxes. Excise taxes, either as a sales tax on retail sales or on manufactures.

It was pointed out that the method and the amount of taxation which will be necessary depends entirely on the nation's business and that, on the basis of 1928 business, the present tax structure would produce some $8,000,000,000 as compared to the $5,101,000,000 estimated for the 1937 fiscal year, without counting processing taxes.

There was believed to be another reason why congressional leaders would prefer to avoid any tax bill to pay the bonus. It was understood that Townsend plan advocates were planning an attempt to attach their plan to any tax bill introduced. Leaders hope to avoid a test on the Townsend plan as long as possible.

FOR EXAMPLE —

NOT a single railway passenger was killed in a train accident during 1935! In snow, in rain, in heat; day and night; across mountain, plain and desert 440 million passengers were carried 18 billion, 400 million miles over the railways of the United States without a single fatality!

A shining example of what can be done and what is being done in travel safety.

Compare the railways' great achievement with the safety record of our public highways—36,400 men, women and children killed in motor vehicle accidents during 1935.

The remarkable accomplishments of the railroads and their employees in accident prevention and safety, didn't just happen. Behind their records are years of planning, the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars for new and safer equipment, safer operation and practices; unceasing vigilance, constant education. Here is one example:

For the protection of the public, the Norfolk and Western Railway, within a recent ten-year-period, spent $3,400,000 for the elimination of highway grade crossings on its lines. Yet, the public and public authorities are continually opening new highways and streets across the railway's tracks. The railroad has spent more than $780,000 for the installation of protective devices at crossings. It spends approximately $240,000 annually for the maintenance of these devices and the pay of gatemen and watchmen. Despite these huge expenditures for the protection of the public; despite the railways' continuous campaign to educate the public to "stop, look and listen" almost one-fourth of all the grade crossing accidents on the Norfolk and Western during 1935 were due to automobiles being driven into the sides of trains. In addition, 110 automobiles were driven through and broke down N. & W. crossing gates which had been lowered to protect them against approaching trains.

The tragic and utterly useless destruction of life on the public highways and at railway grade crossings can and must be stopped. It is going to take system and organization; tireless and intelligent spreading of the gospel of caution and safety first. You and every other citizen of the nation must help. The exercise of caution on your part may save your life. What you say to a friend may save his life.

The railroads have set an unprecedented example in safety. You must do your part.

BUILDING ON THE UPGRADE

FOR those who have viewed with concern the apparent failure of the building industry to catch the stride of industry generally in the march toward recovery there is good news in the most recent statistics concerning building operations.

For the first ten months of 1935, the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor announces, permits were issued for buildings valued at $674,000,000. This is an increase of $264,000,000, or more than sixty-five per cent, over the figures for the same period in 1934. Residential construction begun in October totaled $34,312,021, or 146.7 per cent greater in volume and 197.7 per cent in value than for similar building in the same month last year. Residential construction for the first ten months of the year totaled $232,000,000 or 162 per cent more than the same period last year.

These figures, while impressive, should not be interpreted as reflecting a close approach by the building industry to the activities of normal times. Neither should the student of building conditions be disheartened by a comparison with the peak year of 1928, when total construction in the country was estimated at more than eleven billion dollars. This total was expressive of a building frenzy which produced countless business and residential structures which were not justified by actual needs.

The gain over last year is encouraging and indicates that the industry, so long in the doldrums, is on its way back.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

The death of King George overshadowed an important story. The United States government desired to make public documents concerning American entry and participation in the World War—for historical purposes.

Consent of the British and the French governments was asked, since messages of theirs were intertwined with the American documents. Both the British and the French governments refused.

WHY U. S. IS BITTER

The British cannot understand why American people have become so hostile to isolationists.

The evidence being uncovered by the Nye senate committee investigating committee ought to be an answer. A people once intrigued will swing the pendulum the other way for a long, long time.

Americans may damage themselves by swinging the pendulum so strongly in the other direction—but they have tasted bitterly of intrigue and propaganda.

And it would be disastrous for any group of men to try to stop the Nye investigation. The people demand the truth concerning that disastrous venture of the United States into European politics and European wars.

ARE WE IMPARTIAL?

Yet, asks Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy Association, are Americans neutral even now? Aren't they being swayed by dangerous emotions?

He remarks:

"Under present-day conditions an attitude of impartiality on the part of Americans toward war is far more difficult than in 1914. In the first place, American public opinion, which literally forced the government to conclude the anti-war pact, believes that war is a great wrong, and if the state department refrains from condemn-

T. J. COOLIDGE THIRD TO DISAGREE WITH TREASURY POLICY AND LEAVES

WANTED—By United States Treasury, one reputable, conservative banker, with bond experience, sympathetic with Roosevelt Administration fiscal policies.

WASHINGTON—You won't find this ad in the Help Wanted columns, but it is the language President and Secretary Morgenthau are using mentally in looking for someone to fill the shoes of Under Secretary Thomas Jefferson Coolidge.

The Bostonian's resignation is a serious blow to the New Deal. An able, experienced banker and bond expert with a high standing in financial circles, Coolidge's departure leaves a bad hole in the Treasury.

Morgenthau's dilemma is to find a banker who has the confidence of the financial world and at the same time is pro-New Deal.

What makes matters worse is that Coolidge is the third man who has quit this post because of disagreement with New Deal fiscal policies.

As far back as last spring word leaked out that Coolidge was at odds with his chiefs and wanted to quit. Morgenthau urged him to stay and Coolidge yielded. But his views became increasingly critical.

Climax came when the President vetoed Coolidge's suggestion that the budget message contain a recommendation to stabilize the dollar. Instead, Roosevelt issued an executive order renewing for another year his power to raise or lower the value of the dollar. A few days later Coolidge sent in his resignation.

Morgenthau is looking for his new assistant in non-Wall Street quarters. He wants a banker unsullied by the big money marts of the East, hopes to find his man in the West or South.

Minds of the optimists that this would be a mild winter may now be cast out as futile, and even thought the season had spent its fury and the worst were over, which, of course, is not the case, this current winter still would be deserving of classification as vicious.

It is all very delightful for the younger generation, which has sleds and skis and endless energy, but for those of the adult population who must operate cars on glassy pavements of busy highways, with the lement of danger always present, and must also maintain an adequate supply of coal or oil, it is unhappy weather whose passing will not inspire deep regrets.

Man Urged to Learn Now How to Control Himself

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE been asked to express my opinion on Dr. Alexis Carrel's book called "Man the Unknown."

The thesis of Dr. Carrel's book is that man has learned more about physical science than he has about biological science. In fact, he has learned more about the control of everything in the universe than he has about himself. The result is that we have a world that is filled full of electrical and chemical triumphs, all of which, to a certain extent, are antagonistic to supreme human happiness.

The machines have supplied necessary articles faster than human beings have been able to create the wealth to obtain them. We are bringing into the world great numbers of inferior people, great numbers of unfit people who, because they have not intellect enough, to understand either physical or biological science, are a complete burden on the rest of the world.

Only Remedy

"The only possible remedy," says Dr. Carrel, "for this is a much more profound knowledge of ourselves. . . . Modern science should be given an immortal brain, capable of conceiving and planning its future."

He suggests certain definite programs for the first time exclaim over the school, factory and office, and reject the very principle of technological civilization. We should reject mechanical inventions that hinder human development. We should segregate those who propagate intellectual and moral maladies. Democracy has opposed the development of an

MURDER UPSTAIRS
By ADAM BLISS

CHAPTER 56
"IT ISN'T important," Conrad Withers said slowly, his eyes on mine as he gave me the letter to mail. "But the person to whom it is addressed will be worrying about me and—"

"I don't promise to mail it, but if I get a chance I shall. They follow me, too, you know. Yesterday I tried to make a phone call after Mr. Darien's funeral, and a detective accompanied me to the telephone booth."

"Then, maybe—but it's my only chance. If you'll take it, and get the opportunity—but if you're watched, you—" He was setting incoherently. He kept glancing nervously at the door which I hadn't entirely closed behind me.

"If I'm watched I won't mail it." "Perhaps, if you're in a crowd, if you'd drop it on the floor, or the street somebody would pick it up, and post it. It's stamped and there's no return address on the envelope. I've even discussed my handwriting. There's nothing in the letter, either. As I've signed it by another name—but the person to whom it's addressed will know it's from me."

As yet I didn't have the letter in my hand, but from the way he was speaking I knew that it was addressed to a girl. Otherwise, he would have mailed it himself.

"The police can't know."

"They won't know," Mr. Withers. "I can't mail the letter or drop it in the street without being discovered. I'll bring it back to you—and I'll promise that I'll forget to whom it is addressed."

"Thanks, Mrs. Penny. I knew I could depend on you. I'm in a heap of trouble."

He gave me the letter and I slipped it down the front of my dress.

"Why don't you tell me about it?" I suggested.

"It doesn't concern me alone. There's someone else, too. That's the trouble. If it were only myself."

"If you'll only tell me one thing. Did you come to the house Monday night at 12?"

"You know that, too?"

"Lieutenant Larrabee told me last night."

"I did, but I didn't tell him that."

"Why did you come?"

"To get a package of books I'd left in the hall. I forgot them when I went out. I got the books, took them away with me, and returned later—at about 1."

"You had your key the first time?"

"I did, but I didn't later. I can't explain about the key, Mrs. Penny. That's a secret, too."

"You gave your key to someone between the time you left the house after midnight and the time you returned at 7. I don't know why I asked that, but I know why my mind saw from his start that it was true. He didn't answer, though, and I tried again."

"Why, Mr. Withers, should you give a girl the key to my house?"

"How do you know it was a girl?"

"I know you, Mr. Withers, and I assume this letter that you want me to mail is going to the same girl to whom you gave my house key."

He gulped, and went and closed the door.

"I did give the key to a girl, Mrs. Penny, but I trust you not to say anything about it. I gave the key to a girl, yes, but I made a mistake about the key. It was dark when I took it off my ring, and I got the wrong one. I meant to give her another one. It was only when I got to the house and tried to get in, that I realized my mistake. Then it was too late."

"I understand everything, Mr. Withers, and I won't ask you any more questions."

"But now that you know that much, Mrs. Penny, I want you to tell me the rest. I don't want you to think—" He paused, and his eyes behind his spectacles were pleading with me. "I don't want you to think that I'm—well, trifling with this girl, Mrs. Penny. She's my wife!"

"Your wife?" My legs suddenly gave way, and I collapsed into a chair.

"Yes, my wife," he said, proudly. "We were married the week after Christmas—she's one of my junior students—of age, understand, Mrs. Penny, but her family is peculiar. They are very strict, her father especially. I wanted to wait until the term was over but she wouldn't, so we were married in Michigan during the holidays. No one knows. No one even suspects. You understand my position. It wouldn't be any too pleasant. Mr. Gorham knew I'd eloped with a student."

Mr. Withers getting romantic. Elopement I wondered whether I was hearing right, but apparently I was, because he was continuing his story.

"So we thought we'd wait until summer to announce it, and then have a regular wedding, if we could get her father to consent. We took a little apartment about a mile from here. She meets me there every night—and we stay for an hour or

BUILDING ON THE UPGRADE

FOR those who have viewed with concern the apparent failure of the building industry to catch the stride of industry generally in the march toward recovery there is good news in the most recent statistics concerning building operations. For the first ten months of 1935, the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor announces, permits were issued for buildings valued at $674,000,000. This is an increase of $264,000,000, or more than sixty-five per cent, over the figures for the same period in 1934. Residential construction begun in October totaled $34,312,021, or 146.7 per cent greater in volume and 197.7 per cent in value than for similar building in the same month last year. Residential construction for the first ten months of the year totaled $232,000,000 or 162 per cent more than the same period last year.

These figures, while impressive, should not be interpreted as reflecting a close approach by the building industry to the activities of normal times. Neither should the student of building conditions be disheartened by a comparison with the peak year of 1928, when total construction in the country was estimated at more than eleven billion dollars. This total was expressive of a building frenzy which produced countless business and residential structures which were not justified by actual needs.

The gain over last year is encouraging and indicates that the industry, so long in the doldrums, is on its way back.

WANTED—By United States Treasury, one reputable, conservative banker, with bond experience, sympathetic with Roosevelt Administration fiscal policies.

WASHINGTON—You won't find this ad in the Help Wanted columns, but it is the language President and Secretary Morgenthau are using mentally in looking for someone to fill the shoes of Under Secretary Thomas Jefferson Coolidge.

The Bostonian's resignation is a serious blow to the New Deal. An able, experienced banker and bond expert with a high standing in financial circles, Coolidge's departure leaves a bad hole in the Treasury.

Morganthau's dilemma is to find a banker who has the confidence of the financial world and at the same time is pro-New Deal.

What makes matters worse is that Coolidge is the third man who has quit this post because of disagreement with New Deal fiscal policies.

As far back as last spring word leaked out that Coolidge was at odds with his chiefs and wanted to quit. Morgenthau urged him to stay and Coolidge yielded. But his views became increasingly critical.

Climax came when the President vetoed Coolidge's suggestion that the budget message contain a recommendation to stabilize the dollar. Instead, Roosevelt issued an executive order renewing for another year his power to raise or lower the value of the dollar. A few days later Coolidge sent in his resignation.

Morganthau is looking for his new assistant in non-Wall Street quarters. He wants a banker unsullied by the big money marts of the East, hopes to find his man in the West or South.

minds of the optimists that this would be a mild winter may now be cast out as futile, and even thought the season had spent its fury and the worst were over, which, of course, is not the case, this current winter still would be deserving of classification as vicious.

It is all very delightful for the younger generation, which has sleds and skis and endless energy, but for those of the adult population who must operate cars on glassy pavements of busy highways, with the lement of danger always present, and must also maintain an adequate supply of coal or oil, it is unhappy weather whose passing will not inspire deep regrets.

MURDER UPSTAIRS
By ADAM BLISS

CHAPTER 56
"IT ISN'T important," Conrad Withers said slowly, his eyes on mine as he gave me the letter to mail. "But the person to whom it is addressed—will be worrying about me, and—"
"I don't promise to mail it, but if I get a chance, I shall. They follow me," he said. "Yesterday I tried to call on a phone call after Mr. Darien's funeral, and a detective accompanied me to the telephone booth."
"Then, maybe—but it's my only chance. If you'll take it, and get the opportunity—but if you're watched, you—" He was getting incoherent. He kept glancing nervously at the door which I hadn't entirely closed behind me.
"If I watched I won't mail it," I said. "Perhaps, if you're in a crowd, if you'd drop it on the floor, or the street somebody would pick it up and post it. It's stamped and there's no return address on the envelope. I've even disguised my handwriting. There's nothing in the letter, either, as I've signed it by another name—but the person to whom it's addressed will know it's from me."
As yet I didn't have the letter in my hand, but from the way he was speaking I knew that it was addressed to a girl. Otherwise, he would have mailed it himself.
"The police can't know," Mr. Withers said. "I don't want you to think I'm well, trifling with this girl, Mrs. Penny. She's my wife!"
"Your wife?" My legs suddenly gave way, and I collapsed into a chair.
"Yes, my wife," he said, proudly. "We were married the week after Christmas—she's one of my junior students—of age, understand. Mrs. Penny, but her family is peculiar. They are very strict, her father especially. We had to keep the wedding a secret. I wanted to wait until the term was over but she wouldn't, so we were married in Michigan during the holidays. No one knows. No one even suspects. You understand my position. It wouldn't be any too pleasant if Mr. Gorman knew I'd eloped with a student."
Mr. Withers getting romantic. Elopement I wondered whether I was hearing right, but apparently I was, because he was continuing his story.
"So we thought we'd wait until summer to announce it, and then have a regular wedding. If we could get her father to consent. We took a little apartment about a mile from here. She meets me there every night—and we stay for an hour or two. Her family doesn't know. She can't come over until the family is in bed—about 10 o'clock. I usually go over earlier so I'm there when she arrives. We'd had to be very careful."

"Darien found out some way about the apartment, about her. Last Monday night there was a letter there for me, under the name I used when I rented the apartment. The letter—I've burned it, said something about an appointment the next day—after school. I was afraid, and so was she. We talked it over, and I decided I'd see Darien early Tuesday morning, then slip her a note in class about what he said."
"Tuesday was a little anniversary of ours, so I'd bought her the books, and then I'd forgotten and left them at the house. After we'd talked everything over, I went back to get them and took them to the apartment. It was a mistake. I see that now. Then she discovered she'd lost her key somewhere, her key to the apartment. She loses things easily. So outside on the street, I took from my ring what I thought was the apartment key—but it wasn't. You see?"
"And that's why you went to see Darien that morning?"
"That's why."
"Is she in love with you, Mr. Withers?"
"Of course, Mrs. Penny, and I love her. It's this mess, and what her people will say that they find out. They're very strict. They won't let her go out at all. She hasn't even dared tell them that she knows me outside of my schoolroom."
I got to my feet. I didn't know how long I'd been in her room, but I thought it was time to get ready for the inquest.
"If I get a chance, I'll mail your letter."
He thanked me and I left. Ross, who had followed me upstairs, was standing very close to the door when I opened it. I looked at the letter when I got upstairs. It was addressed to Mrs. Conrad Bennett, 425 Nineteenth avenue. The number was about 10 blocks from the house. I knew the building, a secluded flat. The name must be the one Mr. Withers had chosen when he rented the place. I put the letter in my purse. Luckily, at the courthouse I ran into a friend and she took it for me. Even Larabee wouldn't have noticed how it passed from me to her. I was proud of myself as I entered the coroner's office. A few more of these deceptions, and I'd be a full-fledged criminal myself.

Man Urged to Learn Now How to Control Himself

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
I HAVE been asked to express my opinion on Dr. Alexis Carrel's book called "Man the Unknown".
The thesis of Dr. Carrel's book is that man has learned more about physical science than he has about biological science. In fact, he has learned more about the control of everything in the universe than he has about himself. The result is that we have a world that is filled full of mechanical and electrical triumphs, all of which, to a certain extent, are antagonistic to supreme human happiness.
The machines have supplied necessary articles faster than human beings have been able to create the wealth to obtain them. We are bringing into the world great numbers of inferior people, great numbers of unfit people who, because they have not intellect enough to understand either physical or biological science, are a complete burden on the rest of the world.
Only Remedy
"The only possible remedy," says Dr. Carrel, "for this is a much more profound knowledge of ourselves. . . . Modern science should be given an immortal brain, capable of conceiving and planning its future."
He suggests certain definite programs for this brain to carry out, to-wit: We must break the frame of the school, factory and office, and reject the very principle of technological civilization. We should reject mechanical inventions that hinder human development. We should segregate those who propagate intellectual and moral maladies. Democracy has opposed the development of an elite and, therefore, has helped in the collapse of civilization. We must develop the strong at the expense of the weak.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
S. S.: "Please discuss the advantages and disadvantages of the new contact lenses as compared to ordinary glasses. Is there more danger from breakage when the lenses are directly in contact with the eyes?"
Answer: Contact glasses fit under the eyelids. They look something like the shell of an artificial eye. They are of especial value to actors, actresses and others, who, for the sake of appearance, or because glasses in frames would get in their way, cannot use the latter. Another advantage is that optically it is not easy to correct any error of refraction by placing a fixed lens half an inch in front of a moving eyeball, which is the condition which obtains when ordinary glasses are worn. Most patients wearing contact glasses for the first time exclaim over the clearness and brightness of objects, even though the central vision may be no better than with their old glasses. They are said to be safe and, as a matter of fact, as far as danger from breakage is concerned, safer than ordinary glasses. One patient was thrown from an automobile and knocked unconscious without breaking his contact glasses, whereas ordinary glasses would undoubtedly have been broken and probably cut his eyeball. Contact glasses do not cause irritation of the eyeball or inside of the eyelid. They are not adapted to all cases, but competent oculists are recommending them in special instances.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

The death of King George overshadowed an important story. The United States government desired to make public documents concerning American entry and participation in the World War—for historical purposes.
Consent of the British and the French governments was asked, since messages of theirs were intertwined with the American documents. Both the British and the French governments refused.
WHY U. S. IS BITTER
The British cannot understand why American people have become such isolationists.
The evidence being uncovered by the Nye senate munitions investigating committee ought to be an answer. A people once intrigued will swing the pendulum the other way for a long, long time.
Americans may damage themselves by swinging the pendulum so strongly in the other direction—but they have tasted bitterness of intrigue and propaganda.
And it would be disastrous for any group of men to try to stop the Nye investigation. The people demand the truth concerning that disastrous venture of the United States into European politics and European wars.
ARE WE IMPARTIAL?
Yet, asks Raymond Leslie Buell, president of the Foreign Policy association, are Americans neutral even now? Aren't they being swayed by dangerous emotions?
He remarks:
"Under present-day conditions an attitude of 'impartiality' on the part of Americans toward war is far more difficult than in 1914. In the first place, American public opinion, which literally forced the government to conclude the anti-war pact, believes that war is a great wrong, and if the state department refrains from condemning a country which goes to war unjustly, large sections of American opinion will not hesitate to do so.

"This lack of 'impartiality' is likely to be accentuated by the fact that under present world conditions war is bound up with social systems, such as facism and communism, which are more repugnant to large sections of Americans than was the old German empire. So long as Americans do not control their feelings—as witness public denunciations of Hitler and Mussolini—then it is inevitable, according to these critics, that the United States will eventually enter a prolonged general war.
"Finally, opponents of neutrality legislation challenge the very basis of the idea that it is better for the United States to surrender its treaty rights than to defend such rights, no matter how outrageous the violation, simply because a protest might involve the risk of war. Such an attitude, it is contended, would undermine the basis of law and order in international affairs; when applied to foreign policy, it would reduce the United States to the role of a secondary power. If this country is too timid to protect its legitimate international interests, American individuals and investments abroad will be jeopardized and eventually even the United States itself would be exposed to attack.
"It is pointed out that the same congress which enacted the neutrality act approved appropriations to strengthen the military and naval establishment far beyond what is needed to defend the continental United States from invasion. These critics of neutrality legislation assert that it is probable that congress will demand that such forces be used to defend American interests when they are injured by a foreign state."

A CONTRAST OF VIEWS
Then, Mr. Buell quotes a theory that is a minority opinion (at least at present) in the United States. He asserts:
"In theory the only logical position for the United States is to take a responsible part in creating an international organization which will prevent war from coming into existence. Owing to the attitude of American 'isolationists' and to the lack of sincerity on the part of the great European powers, however, this policy seems impossible at present. It is argued that the only remaining alternative is for this country to build up a powerful army, air force and navy for the purpose of protecting its interests, while taking its chances at being drawn into a new war.
"The new isolationists reply that there is no foreign interest important enough to run the risk of involving the United States in war. If necessary, all of the foreign interests of the United States should be sacrificed to avert this danger. America should resort to force only to resist continental invasion, and should assume an attitude of indifference toward the fate of the outside world. International co-operation is impossible because the European powers wish to use the League purely for selfish interests.
"Others point out that the neutrality proposals are admittedly temporary. In their view, if the League members succeed in restoring peace in Africa, and in particular, if France and Britain give some concrete evidence of their desire to meet the underlying needs of the 'have not' countries, the attitude of the American congress will change, and it will consent to a policy of discriminating against an aggressor."

PATTERN 9665

High time, isn't it, to think of a slip for that new Spring frock? What better than an adjustable wrap-around style, which gives one a perfect foundation for the most closely fitting frocks, whether one wears a fourteen or forty-six. It's so easy to make, too, that one should not hesitate to have an unshrinkable rayon or muslin version for every day, and a crepe or satin version for best. The built-up bodice cuts its straps all-in-one to insure them against slipping, and also includes tiny darts at the waistline to assure a trim fit where bodice meets skirt. As days grow warmer and frocks more sheer, you'll rejoice at the shadow-proof panel this slip automatically affords. To adjust, simply move the button. Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart included.

Pattern 9665 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires 3 yards 39 inch fabric.

Helen Claire

Her heritage as an Alabama belle quite qualifies Helen Claire to portray the part of a Confederate spy in the radio dramatic series, "Roses and Drums", based on incidents of history.

Mary Livingston

Much of the humor on the Jack Benny radio program comes from the antics of Mary Livingston, his wife and "stooge", who is a comedienne of considerable talent.

END OF CLUB SETS APRIL 4-5 FOR FIELD TRIAL

Mt. Pleasant Community to Be Scene; Fifty Pheasants Sought By Men

Aristocrats of dogdom will go on display in the Pickaway Bird Dog club's annual spring field trials on April 4 and 5.

These dates were tentatively chosen Monday night at a meeting of club members in the Leach Motor Co. Various other clubs in this district will be immediately notified of the dates and no change is expected unless the local trial conflicts with trials previously arranged by other clubs.

The trials will be held at Mt. Pleasant near Kinderhook and arrangements will be made for the Mt. Pleasant church to serve meals to the sportsmen. Twenty-five pheasants have been promised the club by the state conservation department and members hope to raise the number to 50.

Members voted also to attend the annual banquet of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association in a body.

The valuable pointer "Imp" owned by Byron Eby was reported either lost or stolen Monday night from his back yard. The dog is two years old and the color, white and liver.

HAPLESS CHICAGO FIVE DEFEATED BY MICHIGAN

By United Press

Michigan was more firmly entrenched in the first division of the Big Ten conference basketball race today after defeating Chicago, 45 to 22.

It was the sixth straight defeat for the luckless Maroons, who scored only three baskets during the game. Sixteen of the Chicago points were made in seventeen chances at the free throw line.

Bill Haarlow, leading conference scorer, pushed his total to 75 points for the season by accounting for two baskets and six free throws. Bill Lang, Chicago forward, was forced from the game after ten minutes with a dislocated shoulder.

Clever ball handling by John Townsend, who dropped in only two baskets himself, accounted for most of the Michigan points. He fed the ball to his brother, Earl, and to George Rudness and Chelso Tompkins. Earl Townsend was high scorer with 12 points on five field goals and two free throws.

In a non-conference game last night, Ohio State lost to George Washington, 45 to 23.

TRAUTMAN IS HONORED AT FOSTORIA DINNER

FOSTORIA, Jan. 28—(UP)—A testimonial dinner in honor of George M. Trautman, newly elected president of the American Association, will be held here Feb. 5, it was announced today.

Trautman coached the Fostoria high school football team in 1914 and 1915.

George Washington Knocks off Ohio, 45 to 23

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—(UP)—Ohio State's basketball team was on its way home today with one victory and one defeat to show for its two game series in the east.

The Bucks defeated Pennsylvania 41 to 37 Saturday night at Philadelphia. On all before George Washington university 45 to 23 here last night.

It was the second game of the season between Ohio and George Washington. In the first contest, the Bucks won 33 to 27.

George Washington was off in front last night and the commanding lead it built up early was never threatened. The Colonials scored 14 points before Ohio broke through for its first basket.

Ohio trailed 26 to 10 at the half.

Rickey in Dizzy Dean's behalf says threat of the Cardinal's vice-president to put a "gag rule" on his ace pitcher will make friends for Dizzy. He pointed out that Rickey drew $60,000 last season and Dean $17,500 and that no other club has such a disparity in wages between the business office and its stars.

Roy Johnson, Yankees' new outfielder from the Red Sox, is tabbed as a coming star in his new surroundings because of Manager Joe McCarthy's ability to handle players with reputations for breaking training rules. Jimmy Fox, Red Sox new first baseman, hit .188 with the Athletics at Fenway park last season. The Cubs will wear no insignia on their uniforms denoting they are National league champions. Billy Jurgens, Cubs' shortstop, plans to experiment with a left-handed batting stance in spring training.

Bud Parmelee, Cardinals' new pitcher, has a weakness for shooting crows and claims to have bagged 17 with one shot recently around Toledo. When Babe Ruth was with the Yankees, he kept trying to get Ed Barrow to make a deal for Bump Hadley. Now that Ruth has gone, the Yanks have finally landed Hadley, whose curve ball always was jinx to the Babe. Burgess Whitehead, Giants' new second baseman, is a Phi Beta Kappa. Lou Gehrig has started working out in Artie McGovern's gym.

Mt. Pleasant Community to Be Scene; Fifty Pheasants Sought By Men

Aristocrats of dogdom will go on display in the Pickaway Bird Dog club's annual spring field trials on April 4 and 5.

The trials will be held at Mt. Pleasant near Kinderhook and arrangements will be made for the Mt. Pleasant church to serve meals to the sportsmen. Twenty-five pheasants have been promised the club by the state conservation department and members hope to raise the number to 50.

Members voted also to attend the annual banquet of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association in a body.

HAPLESS CHICAGO FIVE DEFEATED BY MICHIGAN

By United Press
Michigan was more firmly entrenched in the first division of the Big Ten conference basketball race today after defeating Chicago, 45 to 22.

It was the sixth straight defeat for the luckless Maroons, who scored only three baskets during the game. Sixteen of the Chicago points were made in seventeen chances at the free throw line.

Bill Haarlow, leading conference scorer, pushed his total to 75 points for the season by accounting for two baskets and six free throws. Bill Lang, Chicago forward, was forced from the game after ten minutes with a dislocated shoulder.

Cloven ball handling by John Townsend, who dropped in only two baskets himself, accounted for most of the Michigan points. He fed the ball to his brother, Earl, and to George Rudness and Chelso Tomagno. Earl Townsend was high scorer with 12 points on five field goals and two free throws. In a non-conference game last night, Ohio State lost to George Washington, 45 to 23.

Their meals consists largely of soups, vegetables, bananas, oranges, eggs and one quart of milk each daily. Keeping them in shoes is difficult, Dr. Daeoe said. He added that a regular stock of shoes is kept and issuing new pairs to the girls had become almost daily routine. The same thing applies to dresses.

of police and soldiers in front and emergency gates, behind.

The gates were manned by men ready to close them instantly, to shut off escape to side streets, and Scotland yard men mixed in the crowd.

All these precautions were taken because a burst of fire from a sub-machine gun, a bomb thrown into the crowd of kings and princes and statesmen behind the gun carriage might have altered the course of European history.

But there was no sign from the patient crowd that any but mourners for the dead sovereign were there.

Business Goes On

King Edward, at his father's request, had asked that London conduct its business as usual. There never was any question that it would be. It seemed that King George was mourned sincerely, and London went into real mourning for him today.

King Edward, in the uniform of colonel in chief of the Welsh guards, with its high black bearskin hat in which he has been so often photographed, and his brothers, also in uniform, stood guard, motionless, for 20 minutes before King George's catafalque in Westminster hall at midnight together with the gentlemen at arms and yeomen of the guard on sentry duty.

Through the early hours of the morning the crowds kept pressing on Westminster hall to view the coffin of the dead king. When the hall was closed finally at 4 a. m. many thousands were turned away. It was announced that 240,795 people had passed through the hall since 7:10 a. m. yesterday and 809,182 since the body was placed in state Friday morning.

All during the final hours in which the sailor king's coffin lay in state, crowds were forming along the route of the funeral procession to Paddington station.

It began to rain heavily at 7. The crowds along the route stood fast, adding newspapers to umbrellas to keep off the rain.

At intervals, people sang "Abide With Me," the hymn which King George had asked to be the principal one sung at his funeral service.

Troops had started to line the route at 7:30. By 8 a. m. wide Whitehall, along which the procession moved from Westminster hall, was jammed solidly, as were the Mall and the Green park on its southern side. St. James's street, Piccadilly, Hyde park and the Edgeware road to Paddington.

Many Visitors Faint

Ambulance and Red Cross workers took up stations, and became busy at once treating people who fainted, some of them from exhaustion after an all night wait. Four plain clothes men, in one of flowers was put on also. The royal standard was draped on the carriage.

King Edward, in the uniform of an admiral, stood still at the entrance to the hall. He was pale; his face lined.

Queen Mary's state carriage moved into place behind the gun carriage. On top of the glass paneled coach was a royal crown.

The massed bands of the brigade of guards began playing the funeral march by Chopin in poignant slow march time.

A final order and the procession began at 9:45 o'clock.

First went troops representative of the regiments of the dominions of which King George was colonel in chief.

All Bands in Line

Next the bands of the household cavalry, mounted, then detachments of the guards' infantry, cavalry, artillery, sailors, marines, air force men, territorial army units, reservists, student officers, representatives of military forces allied with Great Britain in the World war, high officers of the fighting forces led by seven field marshals.

Then came the gun carriage. As it moved off, an officer of the household cavalry took his place immediately behind it, bearing a royal standard, and the late king's charger.

King Edward was next, erect in his admiral's uniform. He walked alone. Behind him were his three brothers. Then behind them walked foreign kings and princes; officers of the households of the late king and King Edward—the masters of the horse, the gold sticks, the equestrians—and representatives of foreign governments.

Next went Queen Mary's red and golden coach, and the semi-state coaches of the other women.

A few minutes after the procession started, the royal men bareheaded, the rain stopped. Patches of blue sky were seen through the leaden clouds being driven by a brisk wind and then the sun came out.

Crowds Awe

The measured tramp of men, the slow nerve trying strains of the funeral marches, the boom of the guns and the deep clang of Big Ben mingling with the clear chimes of the abbey seemed to awe the crowds. The bagpipes of the queen's own Cameron highlanders joined with a lament.

King Edward raised his head occasionally to look at the crowds, especially when he heard the clang of an ambulance bell

TALMADGE JOINS PRESIDENT RACE; TO FIGHT F. D. R.

MAON, Ga., Jan. 28—(UP)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge announced his candidacy for president of the United States today, and invited all disappointed Democrats and Republicans to join him in an attempt to drive the New Deal out of power.

The governor's statement—the first open avowal of a presidential candidacy he has delivered—came in an interview with the United Press as he was preparing to rally the south against President Roosevelt at a convention of "constitutional Democrats" here tomorrow.

Talmadge said he would storm New England and the west on a speaking tour in an attempt to knit New Deal opposition for the November election.

Under what party label he will campaign still is undecided, the governor said, but he will attempt to get either Senator William E. Borah, Idaho Republican or Former Governor Joseph P. Ely of Massachusetts as vice presidential candidate on his ticket.

Henry Berrodin, Barberton, Treated in Akron Hospital

AKRON, Jan. 28—(UP)—Henry J. Berrodin, Ohio old age pension director, was reported in critical condition in a Barberton hospital today as the result of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Berrodin was said to have been driving to Columbus when his car struck the rear of a parked truck near Doylestown, O.

Berrodin received arm and leg fractures, head and internal injuries.

Wayne-co authorities were investigating the accident in which Berrodin was hurt. It occurred at the foot of the Doylestown hill, north of Doylestown.

The truck was said by officers to have been left along the road while the driver went into town for gasoline.

Berrodin's condition was so serious that physicians delayed setting his fractured bones.

The old age pension director was said to have spent Monday at his home here and was on his way back to Columbus last night.

walked into the small space in front of the cage on the north side of the room and sat down. The bandits apparently did not know of his presence.

The entire episode lasted about thirty seconds, the employees said, and it all was over so quickly they were unable to give complete descriptions of the men. Both men, they said, were about five and a half feet tall and dressed in dirty muddled clothes. One was wearing a gray topcoat. One held his gun high up on the bank window and the other kept his down close to the counter. When leaving the bank neither of the men backed out, both turned around and ran out as fast as they could travel. Both were young.

Afraid to Shoot

Henry Snyder, Ashville postmaster, heard the alarm ring and ran out in front of the postoffice with a gun. The car passed while he was standing there but he reported he was afraid to shoot for fear he was shooting at the wrong automobile.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff was notified of the robbery attempt immediately and information available was broadcast over the state highway patrol. Patrol cars were dispatched to all main routes in the district. A car answering the description of the one used in the robbery was reported seen on Parsons-ave, Columbus. Officers were sent to check the report.

In a communication from the Veterans' bureau, Cincinnati, Fred Dauenhauer, local commander of the American Legion, was informed it would be a waste of time and effort for veterans to apply to the bureau. They were requested to wait until the proper application blanks are received. QUINTUPLETS SHOWING ENORMOUS APPETITES

CALLANDER, Ont., Jan. 28—(UP)—One year and eight months old today, the Dionne quintuplets show remarkable gains in weight and are developing "enormous" appetites, according to Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo.

Dr. Dafeo said the babies are receiving the same food which has formed the basis of their diets for some time, but that they are now getting "lots of it." Their meals consists largely of soups, vegetables, bananas, oranges, eggs and one quart of milk each daily. Keeping them in shoes is difficult, Dr. Dafeo said. He added that a regular stock of shoes is kept and issuing new pairs to the girls had become almost daily routine. The same thing applies to dresses.

of police and soldiers in front and emergency gates, behind. The gates were manned by men ready to close them instantly, to shut off escape to side streets, and Scotland yard men mixed in the crowd. All these precautions were taken because a burst of fire from a sub-machine gun, a bomb thrown into the crowd of kings and princes and statesmen behind the gun carriage might have altered the course of European history. But there was no sign from the patient crowd that any but mourners for the dead sovereign were there.

Business Goes On

King Edward, at his father's request, had asked that London conduct its business as usual. There never was any question that it would be. It seemed that King George was mourned sincerely, and London went into real mourning for him today.

King Edward, in the uniform of colonel in chief of the Welsh guards, with its high black bearskin hat in which he has been so often photographed, and his brothers, also in uniform, stood guard, motionless, for 20 minutes before King George's catafalque in Westminster hall at midnight together with the gentlemen at arms and yeomen of the guard on sentry duty.

Through the early hours of the morning the crowds kept pressing on Westminster hall to view the coffin of the dead king. When the hall was closed finally at 4 a. m. many thousands were turned away. It was announced that 240,795 people had passed through the hall since 7:10 a. m. yesterday and 809,182 since the body was placed in state Friday morning.

All during the final hours in which the sailor king's coffin lay in state, crowds were forming along the route of the funeral procession to Paddington station.

It began to rain heavily at 7. The crowds along the route stood fast, adding newspapers to umbrellas to keep off the rain. At intervals, people sang "Abide With Me," the hymn which King George had asked to be the principal one sung at his funeral service.

Troops had started to line the route at 7:30. By 8 a. m. wide Whitehall, along which the procession moved from Westminster hall, was jammed solidly, as were the Mall and the Green park on its southern side; St. James's street, Piccadilly, Hyde park and the Edgeware road to Paddington.
